My Goals

My Goals Are NOT:

- To reinvent the wheel
- To repair or band-aid the wheel

My Goals Are:

- Strengthen and build upon what is working well
- Re-envision areas that could use improvement
- Create new pathways forward

How Can You Help?

Your Voice:

- As an advocate for yourself as an advisor for transfer students
- As an advocate for your fellow advisors not attending this session
- As an advocate for your unique set of students that you advise and their needs

Miro – Online Whiteboard & Visual Collaboration Platform

Using Miro

- Work in small groups to answer some questions based on your experiences with advising transfer students, while being able to share with whole group.
- Discuss amongst each other, share stories, learn from each other's successes and solutions to challenges.
- Why Miro?
 - So that I can have your voice documented for future reference when working on projects, initiatives, and/or acting as an advocate for advisors and their needs in serving transfer students
 - All can participate whether comfortable speaking out or not – can anonymously type in your thoughts/comments

In Closing

- I will keep Miro open today and tomorrow if you come up with things you'd like to add.
- Open to one-on-one meetings.
 - Email: skieltyk@unm.edu
 - Outlook (if at UNM): my calendar is always updated, feel free to use the scheduler to suggest a meeting time.
 - Location: UAEC, B48 (temporary location for now, not sure for how long)
 - Work Phone: Don't have one! We can connect over Teams phone (if at UNM) or we can ZOOM with or without video.

You are free to leave Advisor Institute now!

However, if you want to go back to the main room, there will be an optional networking session going on. Look out for an email with a survey! We are seeking your feedback on your experience at Advisor Institute.
